HISTORICAL ERRORS.

The persistency of error, which has often been the subject of lamentation, is shown in some of the published proceedings of the veterans' meetings, held on Thursday, when the gallant gentleman who led the fight against the creation of courtesy colonels was himself referred to as "colonel" instead of as "commander." And most of those there present were wearers of like misleading titles, which had obscured the more honorable ones they had gained in the Army of the Confederacy. Will it ever be possible to undo the mischief that has been done by the conferring of these courtesy titles? We fear not. As we have said before, they is preposterous on its face. So we rewill stand forever upon the records of peat, the logic of the situation, instead some of our Confederate camps to confound and mislead students of history.

However, "better late than never!" This session of the Grand Camp of the Confederate Veterans of Virginia will be emorable not only because it took decisive action in the matter of school histories, but because it passed a resolution discountenancing the use of fictitious military titles.

Another instance of the persistency of error is the popular designation of the old stone house here as "Washington's Headquarters." That this claim on behalf of what is unquestionably the oldest house in Richmond is baseless has been proved time and again, but without the desired effect. The house is forever looming up in our newspapers as "Washington's headquarters."

This claim on behalf of the old stone house is of rather recent origin, and there are two objections to it-first, it is not demonstrable that it was any officer's headquarters during the Revolution; second, Washington was never in Richmond at the head of his army. The American army hereabouts was commanded by the Marquis de Lafayette, but we have never heard that his headquarters were in the city. On the borders of Richmond, both above and below the city, Lafayette's headquarters certainly were, but never in the city, so far as we

The only "headquarters" we ever knew to be in the old stone house were those of a United States military officer, who soon after the evacuation of Richmond held court there, after the manner of a petty offences. That was at a time when the civil law was in abeyance, and when the Federal army officers exercised unlimited authority over our people.

It would seem that there is no way to maintain the metes and bounds of history, except to expose every transgression against them; but that is a difficult and endless work. "Washington's headquarters" is proof of this. , However, we may hope for better things for recent istory from the stand taken by the Grand Camp of Virginia. That dignified and able body recognizes he fact that it and its subordinate camps re looked upon by the public as the ne of the distinguished survivors of ee's army have at times been unable say with perfect accuracy what their ctual rank was when they signed their aroles at Appomattox. It cannot be onceived that they would willingly make disstatements; it is far more probable at their recollections are confused by se fact that their pro tempore positions ere higher than their actual rank.

All this but redoubles our regret that togeth has no tot possessed herself of a pay of her original muster and pay-rolls wat are now in the keeping of the United sage industry should not now revive.

States War Department. We may box is much as we please about our fidelity we cannot but have qualms of science whenever we are reminded of how sadly we have neglected this great duty.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

Some of the Republican papers are advancing a most remarkable, not to say absurd, deduction from the Wolcott mission flasco. That deduction is that the failure of the mission "sounds the death knell of the silver craze," as those papers term the free-silver movement. Nothing could be more illogical. the proposition that the failure of the mission will impart to the free-silver movement increased strength. As we have frequently pointed out, the Wolcott mission was simply one of several subterfuges the Republican party has resorted to, in order to make a show of keeping election pledges, and to stave off meeting honestly the currency issue. It was another case of false pretences. It was intended no less as a sop to the Republican free silverites, and the element that occupied the middle of the road on the currency question, than as one to the Democratic masses. It was designed to play upon the credulity of the people, and distract their attention from the issue of "free coinage of silver in this country, independent of other nations," until something should turn up that would enable the administration to side-track the whole matter with safety. It was another adroit manoeuvre to aid Mr. McKinley in working his way from under the cross-fire, represented on the one side by his own conscience and the bimetallic plank in the St. Louis platform, and on the other

And it must be confessed that the real mission of the mission was successful to a certain extent. Despite all the facts that militated against the assumption that it would accomplish anything for bimetallism, or was expected by its promoters to do so, it did, in a degree, stop free-silver agitation in this country, and cause many persons to indulge the hope that foreign nations would "do something for silver." However, the manoeuvre has been brought to a sudden termination, the whole game is exposed for what it is worth, and those who accepted the appointment of the commission in good faith are disillusionized. The failure of the mission does not change the financial conditions in this country. It does not do away with the cold, hard fact that we have not enough currency to meet the demands of business. It does not reform our banking and currency system-a system by which the financial necessities of the people can be rendered the sport of speculation, and under which the volume of money is contracted at the very times its expansion is most needed. It does not cure any of the many evils that have given force and vitality to the free-silver movement, and furnished its advocates with some of their most convincing arguments. Moreover, the failure places it beyond doubt that the matter of settling our currency question is one entirely of self-dependence. It throws us squarely on our own resources, in respect of working out that problem. It puts the administration in a position where it would seem that it must either stop shilly-shallying and keep absolute faith touching currency reform, or bow down openly before the golden calf. That it will do the former we have no idea. The sole recourse for the remedy of our financial evils is, therefore, with the people, and that they should repudiate the only policy that gives promise of relief of pointing to an end of the "silver craze", foreshadows a more aggressive fight for the free coinage of the white metal than ever before-a fight in which the discrediting of Wolcott & Co. will prove a potential auxiliary of the silver

DANA IN THE WAR.

From the fact that the New York Sun published only a two-line announcement of the death of Mr. Charles A. Dana on the morning following that event, it was generally supposed it meant to leave eulogiums of him to other papers. Indeed, it has been rumored that that was the dying request of Mr. Dana, made to his son, Paul, his chief editorial assistant. But in yesterday's issue of the Sun we find two long editorials-one signed by Mayo W. Hazeltine and the other by Leslie J. Perry-in which Mr. Dana's life is sketched and discussed.

Mr. Hazeltine is the widely-known book-reviewer of the Sun, and he writes chiefly and brilliantly of Mr. Dana's newspaper and other literary work. Captain Perry is an officer in the United States army, and, we believe, has something to do with the compilation of the war records. He writes of Mr. Dana's services as Assistant Secretary of War.

The War Department found it impossible to get from General Grant and other commanders detailed reports of current operations in the field, and Stanton sent Dana to Vicksburg as his representative. There, as Assistant Secretary of War, Dana was upon terms of the closest intimacy with Grant, and police justice, and sentenced to jail from that place he sent long dispatches numerous civilians who were accused of to Stanton daily. And later on in other of Grant's and other commanders' campaigns, Dana performed a like office. Captain Perry shows that Dana's services were highly valued by Lincoln and Stanton. Dana was with Rosecrans at Chickamauga, and he telegraphed about that battle as follows:

"My report to-day is of deplorable in portance. Chickamauga is as fatal a name in our history as Bull Run. name in our history as Bull Run.

Never in any battle I have witnessed was there such a mass of cannon and musketry. This lasted some twenty minutes, and then Van Cleve, on Thomas's right, was seen to give way, but in tolerable order, soon after which the lines of Sheridan and Davis broke in disorder, borns down by immense collings of the state of the st stere looked upon by the public as the epositories and preservers of Confederate distory. The records of the camp ought, herefore, to be kept with precision. Even there much care is exercised, errors are pt to creep in.

THE ARMOR-PLATE QUESTION It is now announced that if the United States Government determines to go into the manufacture of its own armor plate it will probably be offered the Bethlehem and Carnegie works-either or both. We thought it would come to that. The owners of these costly properties would better sell them at far less than cost rather than see them made utterly valueless by the government's establishing its own plant.

When the United States Government ceases to be a customer of Carnegle and of the Bethlehem Company these two plants will no longer have a value, so far as armor-plate making is concerned.

But we much doubt if Congress will determine to go into the armor-plate ousiness on its own account. If the great iron-masters are contributing as liberally as Mr. Hanna thinks they should to the present Ohio campaign, he will see to it that their interests are protected at Washington. And he is a power there. Furthermore, he will have the support of Pennsylvania, which, of course, does not wish new plants established to take business from that State.

We would have Richmond safeguard her hopes and interests at all points, but candor compels us to say that mighty influences are at work to prevent the government from going into the manufacture of armor-plate.

A syndicate of English and New York capitalists is to build an eighteen-story hotel on Riverside Drive, New York, it is reported, to be known as the Hendrick Hudson, and to cost, with the ground on which it is to stand, $4,000,000. It will be a high-roller among hotels, of course, as well as a sky-scraper. For the first time on record, it is said.

NOW ON THE LIST.

"Les Miserables" Accepted at a Meeting of Philadelphia Committee. (Philadelphia Press.)

(Philadelphia Press.)

The Committee on the Girls' High School held a secret meeting at Chairman Thomas G. Morton's home yesterday afternoon and accepted an abridged edition of Hugo's "Les Miserables," by Professor Ferdinand de Sumichraste, of Harvard, and put it on the eligible list of French books for the school.

This is the edition of "Les Miserables" that Miss Dalcourt, instructor of French at the school, recommended in French at the school, recommended in The only Fills to take with Heod's Sarssparilla.

the original list she asked for at the last meeting of the committee, when the book was denounced and refused admission in the school. She said at the time she intended the edition to be used and no other, and pronounced it a very fit book, and declared the classical course in French could not be taught properly without it.

SHOT DAUGHTER DEAD.

Boys Had Londed It and Father Did Not Know It.

HUNTINGDON, October 22.-Edward Brewer, of Coalmont, took his shotgun to a blacksmith for repairs. Some boys saw the gun in the shop and put a load

Brewer brought the gun home, and not knowing it was loaded, began to examine it in the presence of his little daughter. The gun went off and the load of shot tore a frightful hole through the girl's body, killing her instantly.

The Change of Collectors

The Change of Collectors.

The bond given by Mr. Bethel, the newly-appointed Collector of Customs, has been approved by the department in Washington. It was rumored yesterday that Mr. Bethel would enter upon the duties of his office to-day, but the report appears to have little foundation, for if he did, he would have to become responsible for all the transactions of the month, and Mr. Charles M. Wallace, the present Collector, would also be held responsible for all the business of the office until the end of the month.

Mr. Shutte the Best Shot.

The annual outing of the St. Mary's Beneficial and Social Union was taken Thursday at the farm of Mr. Charles Middendorf, in Chesterfield county, about three miles from Forest-Hill Park. The day was most pleasantly spent, among the features of entertainment being a target shooting match. Quite a number of gentiemen did some good shooting, but the medal fell to Mr. Ben J. Shutte, he making 28 out of a possible 38. Mr. Plas Keller took the handsome pipe on 25 points, and Mr. John Vonderloehr got the pocket-knife for third place on 24.

Dr. Stiffer at the Second Church. The Second Baptist church has again secured the services of Rev. J. M. Stiffer, D. D., the eminent scholar and gifted preacher, as supply for a season. Dr. Stiffer has greatly delighted the Second church people on many previous occasions with his masterly preductions, and they hall his return with delight. During his period of supply he will deliver at the evening services a series of expository sermons on the Book of Romans.

The things we said, the walks we went,
The looks you gave, the gifts I sent—
On joys like these our hearts were fed,
With joys like these the glad days sped.
Then hand in hand we stroiled content,
Our eyes by Love made eloquent,
While prying gossips toward us bent
To hear, and, having heard, to spread
The things we said.
Thus, with our hearts together blent,
Our happy holiday was spent;

We find it well we never meant
